

Wayshowers Philosophysm

CALL

November 2019

AROUSE: “Play the game” (of life). I do not recall how many times I have heard that from wayshowers who are ahead of me, but I am sure I have heard it many more times from my Guidance. Even with these reminders (genteel touches and rough clobbers), I can still get stuck in the ‘game’ (rather than playing it). It is true, I need not “play a game” with myself or when it is not necessary. But life is short and I cannot solve the world’s problems. The systems are set up, for me, to be ‘successful’ . . . no matter what the earth bound thinking is. In other words, It is all here for me . . . just as it is all here for everyone else — it has been, it is and it will always be, until there is no more need. I chose and contracted to be here. Still, there many things I will be challenged with: this is the price of my involvement and opportunity. The key is, how quickly can I transform those “challenges” into benefits; Turning weakness into strength, losses into profits and fears into freedom. In reality it does not take much, to be on track with my plans. It’s simply about practice. You heard me correctly . . . “practice.” As I do, I arouse as if from a slumber. I see with new eyes; the kind with vision. I free myself to really be me and be of service. That makes it easy to — See the need, fill the need. That is Spirit’s charge & message.

ANNOUNCE: When I am feeling happy, free and directed, I am a bright star. I am communicating without saying a word. The feeling is: flowing freely, flowing toward. When there is struggle however, the first thing usually dismantled is my communication. Indeed, the strategy of disrupting the enemy’s communications is the first order of business in wars. So, my “communications” tell me a great deal. Am I communicating and expressing my service (or my needs)? Am I sharing in a way that can be understood, accepted and acted upon? If so, I am doing pretty good. If not, I better find a way to get back to it (and quickly). For when my message is unclear, chances are I am in conflict with something or someone . . . I am in conflict with myself. The main danger in all this becomes my inability to share with those who have a need, or to recognize the opportunities Spirit has been guiding me towards. I’ll wish I had a big shoe once I pass them, blowing the timing. That is not what I want. That is not me. So I announce to myself, spirit and to all, “I am here and ready for opportunity. I am willing to go and be of service.” Now that is a shining light of evolution.

AWAKEN: If I were to act (and follow through) on just a single one of the (many times many) inspirations I receive daily, I would be successful beyond my current thoughts. And if I continue that routine of loyalty to my insights and following guidance, I would create a wave of successful energy that would propel me “beyond.” Once this has been put in motion, all I need to do is feed that success, like feeding a fruit tree. I will then have ample opportunities to plant the seeds for many orchards of success. Before I know it, the success will breed its own success. All this, because I awaken to the hum of my potential. Of course, to allow this all to come to pass, I must first pay attention. Am I listening more to the outside chatter (and gossip), or am I resolute in hearing from the inside first? My focus will determine my reality; if I continue to listen to what everyone else says I should be doing, well, then I will start comparing myself to that. It is amazing how comfy I can get in such distraction. It’s like being soothed into complacency before being eaten by barracudas. The “barracuda” is clear with its purpose, why am I distracted in mine? If on the other hand, I draw from the need within, and “re-check” with guidance & true feelings, I will have a formula that will not only free me, but will build me materially and spiritually. I will hear meaning, rather than just listening to a carnival of diversion.

NEED: All things have meaning and importance. Some have more priority than others, depending on where I'm at; depending on the inner need. Certain things may be of first priority to others even though only 'third' priority to me, or the other way around. When teamwork is ideal for my purpose, give & take becomes important and necessary. The awareness, vision, facts and action of my priorities allow me to be flexible; I can take different roads and team-up with different people, because I know I am moving toward my life's direction. The real and ultimate measure of "where I'm at" is my conscious experience — How much fun and fulfillment am I having? — How much accomplishment and achievement am I creating? How free and of-service am I being? And how much am I inspiring that in others? There are tremendous opportunities here; more to do than can be done. The facts are, I am here to do something very simple, something clean and clear, that is singular. That is why I am loyal & responsible to my purpose, to my growth, to my service. It is from this space I recognize, the song of the needs.

PROPHECY: Am I anticipating or am I sensing, am I looking or seeing, am I listening or hearing, am I touching or feeling? When I am "trying," I am grabbing at water; the harder and tighter I grasp, the less I have. By relaxing, I allow the water to be in my hands. I open myself to what I need — I can drink. It's normal to make mistakes, so that I find my stepping-stones, but I need not be caught in fears. I simply tune back into the bigger picture; my bigger picture. I am part of a wave of energy; a destiny. I am also a creator; a giver and taker. These coexist within, at all times, the concrete expression of what I prophesy. This is a power, far beyond "thinking," that manifests through acceptance of opportunity. That is to say, welcoming the growth of the real me; the soul or light. It is what I have come to do. Within it I receive direction, and am readily willing to give it. I am unafraid. It's like being part of Spirit's chain-of-command. I am part of something big, and yet I have an important mission. Of all things it is essential I do not dilute this. Purity is not a "moral" thing, it is a spiritual thing. I tune myself to the rhythms and routines of the universe and the world. I do this to better fulfill my needs. There is a call going out at all times, from everything. But the real call is not outside, it is within. It has been there the whole time . . . and it will always be, mine.