INNA TE- Spiritual Theme of the Month

April 2020

INHERENT: I have looked in books for answers, but only found more questions. I have copied people, but only created shadow. I have run from problems, but they only caught up to me. The facts are, I am the beginning and the end. It is me and it always will be. The nature of things is such that, I have everything I need for all my situations. Inherent in me are the Laws of the Universe and the perfection of me is one of them. In other words, all my situations are perfect for me and what I have come to do. They are my steps to wisdom, peace and freedom. It is this reality that keeps me connected and in-touch with the universe and my guidance; I become more one with all. It's time to love life at the next level — my next level. That means having a little more self-respect. As I do, I will realize my potential through the process of reaching my goals. This is the amazing life within, that overflows into my service and the people I connect with. All because I have let the love out; that which is my true vibration.

NATURAL: I am born of greatness. I say this without arrogance or ego, because I know everyone is great; there are no greater or lesser souls, only different states of consciousness. It matters little all my defects, my shortcomings or problems. In the end, they are all just a great big, So-What! What is important is I keep practicing life and allow myself to find my niche as I do it. To graduate I need this process — to become one with this process. Or to say it another way — I enjoy what I have while I have it. I forget about 'losing it.' This certainly doesn't mean there is a lack of boundaries or that do not respect the things I am working with. On the contrary, I am firm about my energy, and value what I'm working with and what I'm a part of. I am simply saying, I am clear that I am here to work with people; people are my greatest asset. I cannot hold on to anything. It is a need to be authentic, real and true. And yet I still sometimes hold back or give less of myself. I sometimes indulge in fairytales and fantasies. But I continue to share, I continue to take action and thereby continue my growth. It is that commitment which defines my greatness. And that's what I came in with, that is natural.

EASY: I will come to places and times where all I have is what I feel inside. Or that which is inspired. I will only have that inspiration and feeling to be my compass. There will be nothing else other than my guidance. And when I come to those spaces, I say, "GOOD." These are the moments I was born for. They are paths I come to take. It's like voyaging into another solar system; I travel through the unknown, drawn by the pull of inspiration & feeling. And the decision is a simple one . . . 'forward!' Of course, I could buy-into the idea "it's hard," "I'll fail," "I could get lost," or some other fear. These are symptoms that my trust & belief have been misplaced. That I've allowed outer authority, theories or crutches to become an 'end' rather than 'a means to an end.' All things are possible when I am free enough to believe in myself — To believe in my purpose and thrust in life. It actually doesn't take much, just a little achievement & accomplishment. I start with a personal goal. I break it down into 'steps.' Then I break those "steps" into 'mini-steps'; that is, very simple things I can do. And as long as I give myself plenty of time, I will be successful. When I see things as easy I am being true to what's inside. I will be, at-ease.

NATIVE: There have always been challenges in stepping out of the family maze or transcending social preferences. When I do, I can be ridiculed, put down, and even shunned; the tribe pushes me out. That can stimulate fears. After all it's what's been 'taught' to me and reinforced by society. I am not here to be 'made-an-example-of' or become a martyr. I have risen too high for that kind of glory trip. But at the same time, I'm not here to waste time and live someone else's dreams, just because of a little discomfort. Seeking this balance allows affluence to be in my life. So I settle in and re-remember the rules of the game; the rules of life. I stop rebelling at life and myself — I accept and respect the system, people and myself for where things are. I can then utilize my creativity and all of spirit to advance mySelf. For it is worth all the treasure in the world to truly own myself; to become intrepid in my service and fulfillment of my purpose. This is Native to me. It helps me understand what it means to master my energy.

WITHIN: I must stop waiting and act on the 'Need' I have within. I can move quickly but still with wisdom; I do not have to be foolhardy. This is that feeling of successfully acting on my hunches and suggestions from guidance. It builds an inner momentum and closeness to spirit and the universe. It's an energy pattern that cannot be seen with the naked eye but can be most clearly felt. I may stumble in this from time to time, but if I learn from my missteps I will truly be part of a bigger team; Spirit's Team. This is the same vibration I need in working with others. As a way-shower I do not strive to put things into people, but aspire to draw things out of them. At any time there may be an apprentice and journeyman moment. And regardless of which one I am at that moment, I need to be ready to seize that opportunity, regardless of whether I am sharing guidance or accepting guidance. I do this for my own benefit: I do this to build affluence, for myself. I do this for love, with myself. I do this to help, myself. I do all because I was bred to do, born to do, come to do . . . because it's Innate.
